Intelligence-Driven Security Solutions

SecureWorks believes the continuous evolution of your security posture is critical to reducing your organizational risk to an ever-changing threat landscape. That's why threat intelligence supports all aspects of our solutions portfolio. Global intelligence formulated by the SecureWorks Counter Threat Unit™ (CTU) research team is continuously updated and applied to security device signatures and policies, attacker blacklists and event correlation. Intelligence regarding threat actors and their tradecraft is also shared among our security analysts, consultants and incident responders through an open feedback loop, providing content and context for every engagement. As a result, clients receive sharper, more effective support and protection across our entire portfolio.

An effective information security program involves protecting your organization from emerging threats while embracing new technologies and managing daily operations, and ensuring compliance with countless rules and regulations. Combine this with the challenges of finding and retaining experienced security staff and identifying the best way to allocate your budget and resources, and it becomes quite clear that IT security groups are too often stretched thin.

SecureWorks has provided the means to focus the efforts of my organization on what matters. Coupled with the intelligence and engineering supports SecureWorks provides, we have continuous improvement in our capability to deliver secure solutions to the company.
