The Challenge of Threat Discovery

Managed detection and response services (MDR) are popular with organizations looking to improve threat detection, enable rapid response, gain security expertise and reduce their security’s operational burden. Many MDR vendors include some type of threat hunting capabilities designed to search for advanced threats, but often do not employ the comprehensive, continuous, personalized threat hunting organizations want to further boost.
their security posture and protect their environment from sophisticated attacks. Proactive managed threat hunting provides the needed depth and frequency of hunting, contextualized to the customer’s specific IT environment and applications.
